SPQR—the acronym for Senatus Populusque Romanus, the Senate and the Roman People, the (supposed) power behind the state— portrays the development of the art of war from the end of the Macedonian era through the heyday of the Republic of Rome, prior to the changes in the army (supposedly) wrought by Marius and the collapse of the republic.