powerful units that often fought in densely packed formations that restricted their mobility.