Each point of Size denotes from 100-150 infantry (depending on their formation, rank depth and usage) or 100 cavalry. Thus, an African Phalanx unit represents 1500+ men, a Roman Principes unit 300, and a Roman Heavy Cavalry unit about 300 men. Each Roman legion infantry unit is the equivalent of 2–3 maniples (granted, that's an unwieldy division of labor; however, it makes frontages realistic and, more importantly, the game playable). Skirmishers are an exception; their size reflects not their numerical strength but their dispersed type of formation. Size, players will soon realize, is the least important rating a unit has.
